

The Förderverein Amateurfunkmuseum e. V. ...

- ... is a non-profit organization promoting amateur radio museums and history research
- ... has been founded in 1981 by the amateur radio pioneer Hans Schleifenbaum, DL1YA †
- ... is working on the research and documentation of amateur radio and its techniques
- ... is collecting money and amateur radio related material donations, particularly equipment built by radio amateurs, informations and information sources
- ... encourages strongly the promotion of amateur radio museums open to the public
- ... is describing old amateur radio equipment and then presenting it in museums and exhibitions to the public
- ... is also your competent address for all questions about amateur radio history
- ... is with around 400 members quite active on both national and international levels

To manage all these jobs we are looking for radio amateurs and interested persons who would like to support us as a member or even within a working group. In 2014 we had to clear out our depot and now we are in urgent need of new rooms to accomodate the countless exhibits.
